Dear Sirs,

I wish to inform you of a rampant drug problem that is apparently occurring on drilling rigs across the country. I was in a rural café in west Texas and overheard two rig hands discussing their jobs. I was in shock at their blatant discussion of drug paraphernalia that is commonly found on all drilling rigs.

Apparently, there is a pusher on every rig! One of the rig hands was complaining that his pusher hollered at him for putting too much dope in the end of a pipe. It's hard to believe, but he also bragged about being able to roll a 30-foot joint all by himself! The second rig hand stated that he was wasted because everyone on the rig floor had been tripping all day. He said they were tripping out on something called DST. It must be similar to LSD because a man stopped by the rig hands' table and asked for directions to the rig. He said he had to deliver a load of acid.

I just want to be a good citizen and report what I overheard. I hope you can clean up this situation. It's no wonder that the USA is so reliant on foreign oil.

Yours Truly,

A Concerned Citizen
